Animal Husbandry.

In military stables horses are known as pretended to be lame in order to avoid a military exercise. A chimpanzee had been fed on cake when sick; after recovery he often feigned coughing in order to procure dainties. The cuckoo, as is well known lays its eggs in another bird's nest and to make the deception safer it utters any one of the other bird's eggs. An owner conscious of their deceit, as shown by the fact that they try to act secretly and slyly; they show a sense of guilt and remorse; they take precautions in advance to avoid discovery; in some cases they may even feel regret and repentance. Thus, the thief and the adulterer hesitate often before and after their exploits, as if they feared punishment. The naturalist describes how the mouse snatched the cheese; while he pretended to keep the animal regulated him with his eyes, and stopped every time his nose moved, or stepped on the point of a wakened

—Col. Waring, the new Street Commissioner in New York City, says the new law and other waste of the city, if handled the right method, would pay a profit of $1,000,000 a year, or enough to meet the cost of cleaning, paving and sprinkling the streets. The wastes of the city now bring but $150,000, and are treated in a manner that is injurious to the public health and the city.

Col. Waring contends that the responsibility should have complete control over the removal and disposal of house-waste—dividing it into four separate classes—paper, other light rubbish, street sweepings and garbage and ashes. The light rubbish should be taken to the street sweepings are needed in the parks, the garbage is valuable for fertilizer and the ashes is useful for roadways.

A Complete Establishment.

The Johnson Brothers, the popular clothing store at the corner of Mill and Wood streets, are now ready for the Spring and Summer trade.
 They can dress a man from head to toe to the latest style and for a small amount of money. Their Clothing, Hats, Caps, Under-vest, Shoes and Neckwear, are all of the best styles and best makes. They have suits of $5 to $20, honest goods and suits of $20 to $40, and $40 to $50, and suits from $1.00 to $3.00, per suit; and $3
 all made, neat, strong and substantial in the prices. For reliable goods, honest prices and standard houses, go to Johnson Brothers. They keep no auction trash upon the premises.

A Paradox.

If you are going west of Chicago, to visit any of the western States—write to J. R. Carr, District Passenger Agent, Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul R.R.,

 to go, how many in the party, if you have any freight to ship, and he will give you the lowest rates, and the lowest and the quickest time.

THURSDAY, AUGUST 8, 1906.

QUAY CAUGHT AND CONVICTED.

Senator Quay has spent a whole week trying to evade, avoid, dodge or break down the sensational exposure of the origin, causes and progress of the war he is waging on Governor Hastings and the party organization. He has been by getting himself in a position which must make every supporter he ever had blush with shame.

It was thought his boasted cunning would devise some sort of an explanation in answer to the arraignment, terrible as it was.

Instead, he has at last been driven to make a denial, and has been squarely caught in a direct and silly falsehood. It is not a pleasant word to use about one who assumes to be the best of all the Republicans in Pennsylvania, but the only other one that would fit is still more offensive.

Yet, when one looks at it fairly, he is cornered so completely that a lie more or less is a necessity. If he had not lied, he would have been forced to confess that while openly denouncing David Martin, the Philadelphia Republican leader, as a vile and corrupt creature whom he asked the party to help him drive out of power, he was secretly helping him to get elected.

It will be remembered that in a carefully prepared article in this column last week, written without malice, but on the most trustworthy authority, for the information of the public, it was set forth: First, how Senator Matthew S. Quay first declared war upon the Republican leaders of Philadelphia because they would not at his mere command, within a few hours of the nominating convention, thrust out the Republican ticket for mayor.

Second, how in alliance with the Democrats in the legislature, he next made war upon the Republican governor, Daniel H. Hastings, because he would not join in this crusade of unending revenge, and because he would not, at a word from the two senators, disregard the constitution of the state and violate his oath of office.

Third, how he is now making war on State Chairman B. F. Gilkeson, who conducted the two campaigns which brought this city the man against whom the indignation of the city had been directed, and whom he, and Cameron, and they, and all, had agreed two days before should not be nominated in the face of certain revolt and threatened defeat.

Fourth, how in alliance with the Democrats in the legislature, he next made war upon the Republican governor, Daniel H. Hastings, because he would not join in this crusade of unending revenge, and because he would not, at a word from the two senators, disregard the constitution of the state and violate his oath of office.

And, fifth, how, while thus publicly waging war, he has privately sought to make secret treaties and alliances with the very men whom he and his followers are publicly denouncing as villainous and corrupt.

Amazing as it must seem to Republicans who had no previous knowledge of the facts, the only single charge which Senator Quay ever attempted to deny was the last one. The others he could not deny, for they rested on the proof of a hundred witnesses.

But he began by feeling the way toward a denial of the last deadly charge, which on Friday last took more definite shape in the Philadelphia Evening Telegraph. Even then, one of the oldest, ablest and most trustworthy Republican newspapers in the United States.

The Telegraph distinctly charged that at this interview which Senator Quay sought to put off, he was to be seen in sending the so-called "Lexow" committee to Europe for the summer, where it couldn't do any harm to anybody, the condition being that Martin in return was to support him for chairman.

The Telegraph also stated that Mr. Martin, feeling that he had not time to fear from any investigation, rejected the infamous proposal.

Senator Quay had dodged and evaded the charges until he had driven the Philadelphia campaign for the time being, went home to Beaver, and there at long range, finally ventured a flat footed denial. He announced through his favorite organs that he had not had any interview with Mr. Martin since last winter, and that if Martin said otherwise he lied.

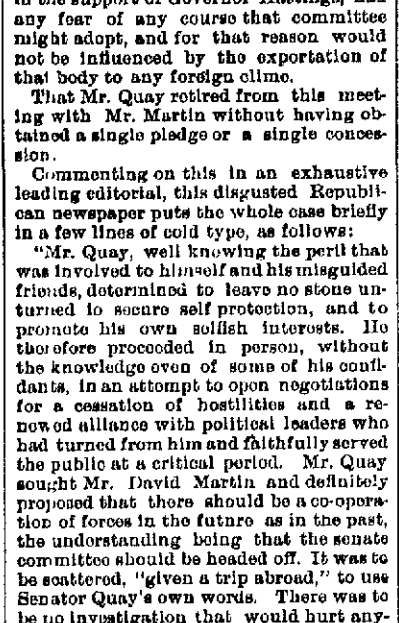

Instantly, Mr. Martin, who had hesitated to speak for publication of a meeting which was essentially a private one, felt that the case was off his hands.

"I did have an interview with Senator Quay," he said, "on Thursday evening, June 13. It was at the house of Mr. Thomas Dolan, who lives near me, in Philadelphia."

Mr. Thomas Dolan is a leading Republican, one of the great manufacturers of this country, a man whom not even the vile and venal Philadelphia Inquirer has ventured to vilify. He was shown Senator Quay's denial and that of Mr. Martin, and asked which was telling the truth.

"It is exactly true as Mr. Martin says," answered Mr. Dolan. "He did have such a conference with Senator Quay at my house on the date mentioned."

TRADE MARK
FURNITURE
SALE

Our Public has become accustomed to large operations at Wanamaker's, yet each great occasion has so much of newness, freshness and vital interest that it stands out in its own vivid originality. The Sixth Annual Furniture Trade Sale is in full swing, its success assured beforehand by the conditions brought about by the power of this vast helpful organization.

The value at present market rates of the furniture offered in this sale is Three Hundred and Fifty Thousand Dollars. The most progressive Furniture retailing has never yet equalled the extent of this offering. It has only been approached in some of our own previous operations. It is not a mark-down of stock on hand, for a quarter of a million dollars' worth of it has been gathered for this occasion since May 1st.

BASIS OF PRICES
Labor, Lumber and Hardware for trimmings are all advancing in price. Furniture is higher now and we expect will be still higher. Our plans were matured so early and executed so vigorously that we own this stock at extremely low costs. Therefore the prices named to-day would average fifty per cent higher if made upon the basis of present values. This fact alone should command the entire retail trade in good Furniture of the city and vicinage.

Prices are guaranteed for the month of August, after which indications point to considerable advance.

FANCY FURNITURE
The collection of Furniture includes Cabinets for curios, music or bric-a-brac; Desks for Bedroom or Boudoir; Pedestals for vases or figures; Fancy Chairs, ornamental and useful.

BED ROOM SUITS
We now hold in our own warehouses, subject to prompt delivery to purchasers, 3500 Bed Room Suits. Among them are:

83 patterns in Antique Oak, $10 to $135.
65 patterns in Mahogany, $10 to $100.
64 patterns in Birch, $10 to $100.
14 patterns in Maple, $10 to $125.
9 patterns in Walnut, $10 to $85.

SIDEBOARDS
Nearly the entire stock accords with the universal demand for Oak, of which we have one hundred and four styles at $10 to $225, an aggregate stock of about 1800 pieces.

suffering sick and looking at it critically.
 "If you are married, if you are young, you had better ask it home to your wife. He might be able to find a mate to it."
 The gentleman addressed read dizzily back against the door jann.
 "Say," he said, with a sickly smile, "you don't happen to be in a state of doubtless yourself, do you?"
 He replied the first speaker half regretfully.
 "I thought not," went on his companion compassionately, "or you wouldn't suggest any such move as that. You see, an married and know how it would work. You took up the glove and kept it yourself if you want to, and then stop aside here, and I will tell you something that you can store away in your memory for a rainy day, or a day when you are in a hurry. I once found a glove like that, and, thinking as you do, that my wife might be able to make use of it, I stuck it in my pocket and took it home. That was pretty soon after I was married. You will observe that I refrain from doing so now."
 He stopped and his eyes took on a reflective, faraway look.
 "Well," queried his chance acquaintance, "what happened?"
 "Yes," pursued the married man, "that's it. What happened? By the time I got home I had clean forgotten all about that glove. Chicago temperature was giving an exhibition of some of its most daring acrobatic feats at that time, and the light coat I wore when I found the glove was as ineffectual as a piece of gossamer would be in keeping out the cold. It followed close on the heels of that blistering day. So I hung the garment up in a closet, and when I next remembered its existence it was under very distressing circumstances. It was about a week later. I had bought theater tickets and had come home filled with pleasurable expectations of an evening's enjoyment. When I reached our hotel door, I found that my wife had gone, and neither the proprietor nor the clerk was anywile connected with the establishment could give me the slightest information as to where she had gone or when she was coming back. Now, that might be an everyday performance for a married man, but I was not married. We had been married my wife had never before gone away without leaving an explanation of her absence, and it worried me not a little.
 "The next morning, then, went up to our rooms again and commenced to ransack the place for a message from her. In a very short time I found what would not have escaped my notice at first had not my wife been so absent. I found it on the corner of the table was my light coat, and lying close beside it was that everlasting glove and in a note from my wife telling me that in looking for my clothes she had found the glove and that she had already explained everything to her. Her life was blighted, she said, and she was going home to her mother. The old folks lived down at Streator, and I followed her down to Streator, but I was not so firmly as the idea imbedded in her brain that that little yellow affair was a memento given me by some other woman that I should take it away for a memento. Therefore I could get her to come home with me. Sometimes I fancy that to this day she believes I was deceiving her. At any rate, I was just as hot you would keep that piece of dirty rags. My wife said. The unmarried man smoothed out the dainty thing, thoughtfully folded it and put it in his pocket. —Chicago News.

CLEVELAND, VERY.
 An Inmate Man Manufactures a Master Key.
 The state board of charities made an official visit to the Western Inmate Asylum, Richmond, Ind., a few days ago, and they found a man of remarkable patient and a tall, thin, dark man, who had been confined in the institution for several years. Superintendent Smith carries a souvenir of the man's efforts—a key made of a part of a common knife handle.
 One morning some time ago the attendant in one of the wards found that he was short a patient, and it developed after a little investigation that the missing man was a tall, thin, dark man, who had been confined in the institution for several years. Superintendent Smith carries a souvenir of the man's efforts—a key made of a part of a common knife handle.
